II. Breeding Principles

The breeding of dogs is a serious responsibility and should never be taken lightly. Every breeder, or prospective breeder, must be prepared:

- to make a serious commitment of both time and financial resources to ensure that a proper breeding program can be carried out.
- to provide for the wellbeing of the dogs, including the ultimate placement of the dogs.
- to preserve and maintain the breed for future generations through the judicious selection of breeding stock.
- to share knowledge and experience with fellow breeders, particularly those who are novices.

IV. Breeding Practices

It is the responsibility of every breeder to breed dogs that are healthy and sound in both mind and body; to ensure that the dogs are true to their heritage; and that they meet the requirements of the CKC Breed Standards. A breeder should give priority to the following:

- Increasing knowledge of structure, movement, behaviour, principles of genetics, and of basic animal husbandry.
- Regularly test for health and genetic problems, including but not restricted to hips, patellas, eyes, thyroid, etc. and encouraged to openly share the results of all such testing; and to follow recommended protocols for the control of genetic disease.
- Select breeding stock that conforms to the approved CKC Breed Standard, of sound health and stable temperament.
- Owners of stud dogs should ensure that the owner of the dam has the ability and the necessary facilities to successfully whelp, raise and assure the future wellbeing of any resulting litter.
- Owners of dams should ensure that the owner of the sire has the knowledge and experience to provide a safe and proper mating, including the diligent care of the dam.
- All litters and all dogs in each litter shall be registered with the CKC as soon as is reasonable after the birth.-Upon the sale of each dog, breeders shall transfer ownership and register each dog in the name of the purchaser in accordance with CKC stated requirements. Every breeder is responsible to maintain current and accurate records pertaining to their breeding program, the details of all dog registrations and all sales transactions.

V. Selling Practices

It is the responsibility of every breeder to adhere to proper and ethical business practices when buying, breeding, selling, and placing their dogs. To fulfill this responsibility, breeders should be committed to the following general sales practices:

- All dogs must be registered with CKC, not on a “with or without papers” basis.
- The breeder is responsible for the submission and payment for all registration applications.
- All dogs must be uniquely and permanently identified with an approved Canadian Standard microchip transponder or a tattoo, prior to leaving the breeder’s premises.
- Potential purchasers of dogs need to be reasonably screened for their suitability and capability to own and meet the needs of the Shiba Inu breed. The concept of a dog being a lifetime commitment should always be reinforced with the purchaser.
- Breeders shall represent their dogs to prospective purchasers with honesty and integrity.
- Breeders are responsible to provide a written sales agreement containing the name of the purchaser, the date of sale, a statement confirming that the dog is purebred, the name of the breed and the dog’s unique identification number. In addition, all terms and conditions of the sale, including a first right of refusal to rehome or replacement policy, shall be clearly defined. The agreement shall be properly dated and signed by all parties.
- Breeders shall provide the purchaser with a reasonable written guarantee that protects the dog, the purchaser, and the seller.

- Regardless of age, spaying or neutering of all dogs sold as companions should be actively encouraged.
- Purchasers are to be provided with copies of all relevant documentation, including CKC registration documentation, copies of non-breeding agreements, completed sales agreements, guarantees, health and vaccination records, and instructions on the care, training, and diet for the dog.
